Moulton accepts Fulbright award on behalf of La. chapter

Dr. Patrice Moulton, president of the Louisiana Fulbright Chapter, accepted the Fulbright Association’s National Service Award on behalf of the chapter at the Fulbright Awards Ceremony in Washington, D.C.

The Fulbright organization highlighted several service projects that the Louisiana Fulbright Chapter had completed including author talks, poetry readings, recovery projects in Ida torn communities and the feeding of 500-600 people a Thanksgiving meal in a devastated community on the coast below New Orleans. Currently, there are 56 chapters representing Fulbright around the United States.

Moulton, professor of psychology at Northwestern State University, has served as president of the Louisiana chapter since 2020.

“It is one of the great honors of my life to belong to the global family of Fulbrighters,” Moulton said. “Fulbright is known for their international exchange programs and working for peace around the world. As individuals return from their international experience, they dedicate time within their state doing service projects.”

The Fulbright Program is the flagship international educational exchange program sponsored by the U.S. government. It is designed to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries.

Northwestern State releases DEI Strategic Plan

Northwestern State University’s Office of Inclusion and Diversity has developed a Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Strategic Plan.

The plan provides a comprehensive outline of the university’s commitment to increase diversity among students, faculty, staff, and administration. In addition, the plan will integrate diversity and inclusion throughout the academic curriculum, ensure that diversity and inclusion are reflected in policies, procedures, budgeting, and university operations and lastly foster a more inclusive campus environment.

NSU’s Vice President of Inclusion and Diversity Dr. Michael T. Snowden said the five-year document is “a roadmap or compass which our University will use to guide our policy, practice and programs.”

“The plan is intended to invoke a sense of shared commitment to what we are doing in the DEI space,” Snowden said. “The important thing is we do the work and transfer the written policy into tangible action, hopefully for the betterment of the institution.”

NSU first began discussing a diversity plan in 2005 and developed a plan that was adopted in 2010. That plan laid out goals for diversity planning, needs assessment, cultural change through campus activities, intentional recruiting for diversity, and retention strategies. In 2016, administrators appointed a diverse group of students, faculty and staff to a steering committee that created the Center for Inclusion and Diversity to provide a welcoming environment for all students and advocate for minority and marginalized populations.

To further understand the perceptions of inclusion and diversity on campus, in 2018, the committee distributed a university-wide climate survey to identify specific diversity needs at NSU. The following year, a Diversity Planning Team developed strategic, measurable goals to increase diversity and improve inclusivity at NSU. Snowden joined the NSU staff in 2020 as the university’s vice president of Inclusion and Diversity to coordinate efforts that foster a sense of institutional belonging and promote cultural competence.

Now that the five-year strategic plan is in place, Snowden is also implementing a framework of measurable goals to note benchmarks in access and equity, academic engagement, environment, and infrastructure. The plan endeavors to engage with students and alumni of color through a speaker series and academic programming in Indigenous, Black and Creole studies.

Snowden will visit with campus constituency groups which include Faculty Senate, the Dean’s Council and Student Government Association to share an overview of the plan and answer any questions.

The plan can be accessed at: https://www.nsula.edu/diversity/.

participants who are chosen for their academic merit and leadership potential the opportunity to study, teach, conduct research, exchange ideas and contribute to finding solutions to shared international concerns.

Moulton served as a Fulbright Specialist to Nepal in 2018 and has been a member of the Fulbright Association since her return as a Fulbright alumna.

State chapters provide Fulbright alumni and visiting Fulbrighters with diverse opportunities for networking, professional development, mentoring, cultural enrichment, and community service.
Food Pantry continues to help students in need

The Pantry, located in the Trisler Power Plant, provides NSU students with access to free food assistance and personal care items, helping students stretch their food budgets. Services are available to all students, five days a week. Hours are 9 a.m-4 p.m. Monday – Thursday and 9-11 a.m. Friday.

The NSU Pantry is funded through generous donors. We greatly appreciate your support for the health and well-being of our students. All financial donations will be used to purchase food and other necessary items for students. Donations are tax deductible.

If you are interested in making a monetary donation, visit https://northwesternstatealumni.com/the-pantry/.

The Office of TRIO Student Support Services at Northwestern State University has received a $500 First-Generation College Celebration grant from the Council for Opportunity in Education (COE) and the Center for First-Generation Student Success. Director of the Office of TRIO Student Support Services Frances I. Welch said NSU was one of just 50 recipients out of thousands of applicants nationwide and the only college or university in Louisiana to receive the grant.

The Student Support Services (SSS) program is a federal TRIO program that works to support students who are first-generation, low-income or students with disabilities who have potential to meet the challenges of higher education by strengthening and developing their academic and self-management skills. Its offices are in the Kyser Hall, Room 243-B. During the 2020-2021 academic year, 41.3 percent of undergraduate students and 50.1 percent of graduate students attending Northwestern State identified as first-generation.

The grant will allow the office to reach more first-generation students through a multi-day celebration to not only highlight these students but to emphasize the strength it takes to be the first in a family to attend college, according to Assistant Director of TRIO Student Support Service Vashaun South, who wrote the successful grant proposal.

Events will begin with a “Meet Them Were They Are” program on Oct. 31 from 10 a.m. – noon on the brick way near Kyser Hall. Students will receive candy bags with an attached agenda of the First-Generation College Celebration Week’s events.

Three rounds of “Jeopardy: The College Edition” will be held on Oct. 31 – Nov. 2 at 5 p.m. in the President’s Room of the Friedman Student Union with the finals on Nov. 8 at 5 p.m. The championship round is being held on National First-Generation College Celebration Day. The Jeopardy game will be designed around questions that deliver information about the “who, what, where” resources can be found, highlight prominent formal first-generation students, drop out factors and fun facts.

There will be a “Chat and Chow” Breakfast on Nov. 2 from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. in Iberville Dining Hall.

A “Deck the Doors” program is on Nov. 7 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. in Varnado Hall. “Deck the Doors” is an opportunity for our first-generation students to express themselves by making individualized doorhangers.

In addition to the effort to reach more first-generation students, South said Student Support Services will launch the “I’m First and Here’s Why I’m Worth It” campaign. In this initiative, personal stories will be gathered from faculty, staff and students who are all first-generation college students. This is a print campaign that will include a photo and story on each individual. The posters will be displayed throughout campus to highlight the challenges and celebrate the achievements of being first-generation.

The Department of Fine and Graphic Arts and the Department of English, Languages and Cultural Studies invite all students, faculty and staff to honor a loved one who has passed by contributing to the Day of the Dead Altar built under the stairwell in Hanchey Gallery on November 1st through 4th. Day of the Dead is a fusion of Indigenous practices honoring the dead with the Catholic commemoration of All Saints and All Souls Day that originates in Mexico and has since the 70’s grown into a multicultural Pan-Latino celebration. Bring a framed picture with or without a special memento memorializing your loved one and set it up on the altar, making it a spiritual and healing moment of remembrance.

Northwestern State began participating in the annual National First-Generation College Celebration in 2019 when the university received its first grant that allowed it to participate.

“A majority of what we do is achieved through cross campus collaboration and partnerships,” said South. “We recognize that student success is more achievable when we all work together. With such a large number of our student population identifying as first-generation, it is imperative that we celebrate and highlight those individuals while shining a light on what it means to be first-generation and educating those who may not know the significance of the challenges and achievements of said individuals.”

NSU will host Indigenous/Latino guest speaker/lecturer

In celebration of Native American Heritage Month, Northwestern State University will host a guest lecture by Bobby Gonzales titled “We Are Still Here: How First Nations Survived Pandemics and Other Catastrophes.”

The lecture will take place beginning at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 2 in the Student Union Ballroom. The talk is free and is open to the public.

Gonzales is an Indigenous/Latino lecturer, storyteller and poet based in New York City. He is the author of several books including “TAINO ZEN” and “The Last Puerto Rican Indian: A Collection of Dangerous Poetry.” Gonzales has presented at Carnegie Hall, the National Museum of the American Indian, the Detroit Institute of Arts and many other museums and colleges. He organizes and emcees at the annual Bronx Native American Festival. He was selected as the 2018-19 New York City Indian of the Year.

Gonzales’ lecture is an examination of how Native Peoples throughout the Western Hemisphere overcame epidemics, land theft, forced relocation and the violent attempt to assimilate them through the boarding school system.

“Dr. [Michael] Snowden (vice president for Diversity and Inclusion) and I are excited to host Mr. Gonzalez as his lecture exemplifies our efforts to bring forth more awareness and cultivate diversity, equity and inclusion,” said Brittany Blackwell Broussard, coordinator of the Center for Inclusion and Diversity.

The lecture is sponsored by the American Indian and Indigenous Studies Minor, Native American Student Association and the Center for Inclusion and Diversity.

“Unfortunately, when much of the public thinks about American Indians and other Indigenous people, they think about us as if we are in the past. But we are very much part of the present,” said Dr. Rebecca Riall, assistant professor and coordinator of Ethnic studies at NSU. “This is an opportunity to learn about contemporary issues facing Indigenous communities.”
