Last academic year, there were 10 graduates of Northwestern State University's Counseling Program. All 10 graduates were from the Clinical Mental Health Counseling Concentration. Graduates in the Clinical Mental Health Concentration are required to pass the NCE in order to obtain licensure. However, not all graduates take the NCE before graduation. These numbers are based on self-report.

Graduates in the School Counseling concentration are required to take the School Counseling PRAXIS exam for certification as a School Counselor.

Of the admitted students in this cohort, 90% graduated from the program in the expected time period and 100% of those program graduates who were actively seeking jobs are employed (based on student self-reports).
