Henry was born at Melrose Plantation in Melrose, Louisiana. He was commissioned in 1916 as Second Lieutenant of Infantry, Louisiana National Guard for active duty in the Mexican Border Dispute. After receiving his BS degree from Louisiana State University in 1917, Henry served in France and Germany during World War I. After the war,

Henry studied at various Army schools and took graduate courses at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Soon after, he conceived, organized and operated the Armored Force School at Fort Knox, Kentucky that had a peak enrollment of over forty thousand students. Henry also served in Africa, Italy, France, Germany and the Western Pacific Theater during World War II. He was on General George C. Marshall's staff as the War Department's first director of research and development activities, and later was named assistant chief of staff for personnel.

Henry retired as Major General in 1946. After this, he was employed by Ethyl Corporation as manager of Plant and Employee Services, and later manager of Community Relations. Among his many civic activities, Henry served as president of the Baton Rouge Chamber of Commerce and the Baton Rouge Freight and Transportation Bureau. He retired from Ethyl in December 1959.
