The Doctor of Education in Adult Learning and Development at NSU focuses on developing community college leaders and preparing practitioners to work with adult learners and workforce development. Graduates will be qualified to assume advanced leadership roles in the areas of community college leadership, post-secondary education, adult learning and development, and scholarship. The Doctor of Education is a practitioner degree program that prepares students for the practice of adult learning and leadership across the following domains: teaching and learning, adult development, curriculum and instructional design, workforce development, program management and planning, organizational change, and community college leadership.

The Doctor of Education degree is for students who intend to pursue or advance their careers at the highest levels of professional practice in the program concentration areas of Community College Leadership and Adult Learning and Workforce Development.
